

N) Safe Haven Infant Protection Act

Certainly we would prefer that women call us while they are pregnant, not after giving birth, so we can provide proper medical care and counseling. But at the same time, we want to assure parents who choose not to keep their children that they will not go to jail if they deliver their babies to safe hands in a hospital emergency room or a police station.

Safe Haven

Allows a distressed parent to give up an unwanted infant safely, legally and confidentially

Preserves the parent from arrest or prosecution for abandonment

Requires no names or records

Permits babies up to 30 days old to be given up at any hospital emergency room or police station in New Jersey

Makes medical treatment and social services available to the birth mother

Puts the child into the custody of the Division of Youth and Family Services, which places the infant in a foster or pre-adoptive home

In New Jersey, no one ever has to abandon a child again.

It's a new law: the New Jersey Safe Haven Infant Protection Act.

Under this law a person may give up an unwanted infant anonymously. As long as the baby has not been abused, the person may do so without fear of arrest or prosecution.

Why is New Jersey doing this?

The purpose of Safe Haven is to protect unwanted babies from being hurt or killed because they were abandoned.

Abandoning a baby puts the infant in extreme danger. Too often, it results in the baby's death. It is also illegal, with severe consequences. But with Safe Haven, this tragedy doesn't have to happen in New Jersey again.

How does it work?

A distressed parent who is unable or unwilling to care for an infant can give up custody of a baby less than 30 days old safely, legally and anonymously. All that is required is that the baby be brought to a hospital emergency room or police station in New Jersey. As long as the child shows no signs of intentional abuse, no name or other information is required.

Can only a parent bring in the baby?

No. The parent may choose to have someone else bring in the infant. It can be a family member, a friend, a priest or minister, a social worker—practically anyone.

Does a parent have to call before bringing in the baby?

No. A parent can walk in anytime.

Can you help a parent decide where to bring the baby?

Yes. The parent can call the Safe Haven Hotline, 1-877-839-2339, and get the address and directions for any hospital or police station in the state.

Does a parent have to tell anything to the people taking the baby?

No. Nothing is required. However, hospital personnel or police will record any information that a parent is willing to share, such as the child's health, race, date of birth, place of birth or the medical history of the parents. This could be very useful in caring for the child. These questions can be answered anonymously on a medical questionnaire that is available at the police station and hospital.

What happens to the baby once the baby is dropped off?

The child will be examined and given medical treatment, if needed. Then the Division of Youth and Family Services will immediately take custody and place the child in a foster or pre-adoptive home. After 21 days, DYFS will proceed with the permanent adoption of the baby.

What happens to the mother when she drops a baby off?

If the mother brings in the baby, she will be offered medical treatment and social services. She can, of course, refuse if she wishes. Once she has safely turned over the baby, she is free to go. She can complete an anonymous medical questionnaire and drop it in any mailbox.

Don't let another baby be abandoned. If you or someone you know is considering giving up a child, learn about your options.
